Take a group ESP test with your friends and family

Schedule a time for your group to test together

Group testing enables you to increase your ESP score and discover which of your loved ones are the most telepathic. New studies in neuroscience report that friends and family naturally synchronize their brain waves when they are together, and even when they're located far apart. With the True ESP app, you can invite group members to test at specific times, and then watch their names appear in the queue screen as they join each test. A new test begins every 10 minutes, so your friends and family can take multiple tests in a row and then compare results with each other. A new documentary film will feature people who score well in group ESP tests – and you could be included!

A new test begins every 10 minutes around-the-clock

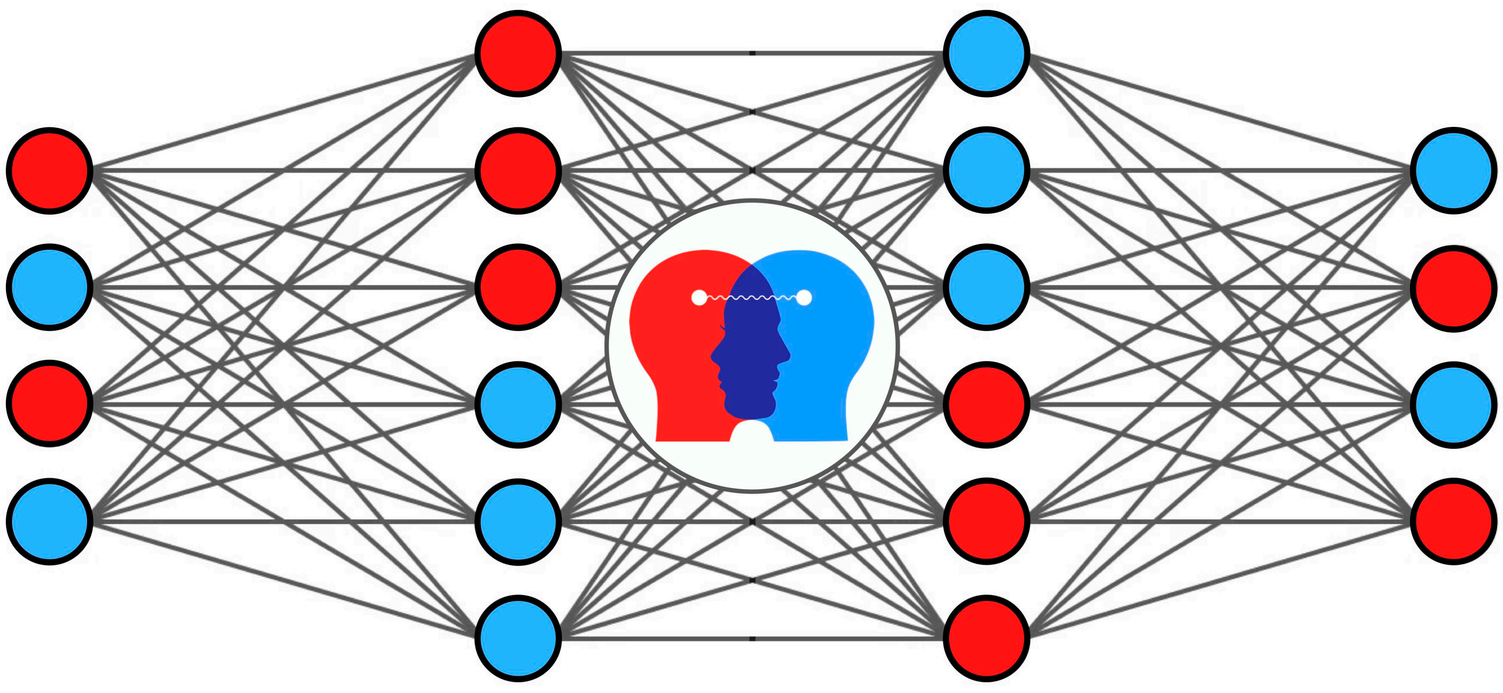
Participants score 60% higher when they are joined by friends and family in telepathy tests



Studies show telepathy is hereditary by maternal ancestry

Be part of a documentary about ESP in families

If your group of friends and family scores high enough with the True ESP app, then you could be part of a new documentary about telepathic abilities in families and large groups. The director of this film is looking for participants who perform well together on group ESP tests.

Group testing with friends and family

- Invite at least 3 people to download the True ESP app and register a free account
- Schedule a time and date for your group to meet together and take a telepathy test
- Your score will be updated every time you take an ESP test with friends and family
- The documentary director will contact group members who perform well together
